

Unveiling market insights

1.Introduction

1.1 Overview

Market research is the process a business goes through to learn key details about its target customers and consumer behavior. It includes multiple steps such as planning the research methods, identifying the target markets for analysis, implementing the research plan, gathering data, processing and interpreting data and reporting it. By conducting market research, businesses can learn about specific markets, the potential for a service or product to succeed and patterns of consumer behavior that may benefit their sales goals. Businesses use the results of their research to inform their strategic planning.
